A close-up photograph of a bento box, a traditional Japanese meal. The box is filled with a variety of dishes: several pieces of sushi (maki) with visible fillings of salmon, tuna, and vegetables; a large, sliced avocado; a portion of green salad with shredded carrots and red cabbage; a long, golden-brown fried item, likely a tempura; and a small portion of a breaded item, possibly a cutlet. The food is arranged neatly on a white plate, and the background is a solid orange color.

A close-up photograph of a white rectangular plate filled with a meal. On the left side, there is a serving of white rice topped with several large, succulent shrimp that have been cooked in a dark, glossy teriyaki sauce. To the right of the rice, there is a variety of fresh vegetables: a large piece of green broccoli, a fan-shaped stack of sliced avocado, a pile of shredded red cabbage, a pile of shredded orange carrots, and a small pile of yellow corn kernels. The background is a solid, muted green color.
